

ClearTrack® 2050

Class R1 TRNTX | Class R6 TCMTX

Investment Objective

The fund seeks the highest total return (that is, a combination of income and long-term capital appreciation) over time consistent with its asset mix. The fund will seek to reduce volatility as a secondary objective from the five years before until five years after the fund's target retirement date of 2050 (the "Dynamic Rebalancing Period").

Macroeconomic Overview

Equity markets across most major regions enjoyed strong performance in the quarter. Global equity performance (as represented by the MSCI All Country World Index) was up 3.3% in 2Q17. With the exception of Japan, this marked the second consecutive quarter of positive equity returns for major regional indexes. U.S. equity markets (as represented by the S&P 500®) were a particular source of consistency, appreciating in each month year-to-date, a trend that began in November 2016 following the U.S. presidential election. Global bond markets extended a performance rebound that began in the first quarter, on the heels of historic losses in the fourth quarter of 2016. Global fixed income (as represented by the Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate Total Return Index) appreciated 2.6% in the quarter and U.S. bonds (as represented by the Bloomberg Barclays U.S. Aggregate Bond Index) added 1.4%.

Fund Overview

The Transamerica ClearTrack 2020 Fund outperformed its benchmark, the Dow Jones Target 2020 Index, during the quarter, net of fees. Outperformance was a result of the fund's asset allocation effects, as the fund's strategic asset allocation is overweight equities relative to its benchmark. The primary benefactors were the impact from international equities, U.S. small cap equities and U.S. fixed incomes. The fund was overweight international equities, which had strong returns in the quarter. The fund's underweight to U.S. fixed income and U.S. small cap equities, which has relatively low returns, added relative value. In absolute terms, the fund's positive return was led by equities, specifically international equity, emerging markets equity, and U.S. large cap equity. U.S. treasury inflation-protected securities was the only sector in which the fund had a negative return in the quarter.

Outlook

QS's short-term market outlook can be summarized as moderately cautious, particularly in comparison to their strongly positive equity position at the end of the first quarter. In spite of this moderation, they still favor in U.S. stocks vs. investment grade bonds. That view is largely driven by their view on valuation. The largest driver of change between the end of Q1 and the end of Q2 was their leading economic indicator index, which moved from strongly positive to negative territory. Over this period, three important indicators worsened within manufacturing, workforce productivity, and house construction. In other asset classes, they remain overweight U.S. high yield versus investment grade bonds. While their preference for U.S. stocks is moderate, they have a much stronger conviction in European stocks versus European investment grade bonds.

The performance data presented represents past performance, which is no guarantee of future results. Current performance may be lower or higher than the performance data quoted. Please see transamerica.com for performance data current to the most recent month-end. The investment return and principal value of mutual funds will fluctuate over time so that shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost.

Net asset value (NAV) returns include reinvestment of dividends and capital gains but do not reflect the deduction of any sales charges. There are no sales charges for Class R6 shares. Class R shares are available only to eligible retirement plans.

The gross expense ratios for this fund are 1.56% and 0.92% for Class R1 and R6 shares, respectively. The net expense ratios for this fund are 1.20% and 0.55% for Class R1 and R6 shares respectively. Contractual arrangements have been made with the fund's investment manager, Transamerica Asset Management, Inc. (TAM), through March 1, 2018.

Performance figures reflect any fee waivers and/or expense reimbursements by the Investment Manager. Without such waivers and/or reimbursements, the performance would be lower. Future waivers and/or reimbursements are at the discretion of the Investment Manager.

The Dow Jones Target 2050 Index is an unmanaged index used as a general measure of market performance. It is not possible to invest directly into an index. Calculations assume dividends and capital gains are reinvested and do not include any managerial expenses.

The ClearTrack® target date options invest in exchange-traded funds (ETFs) which may represent a variety of broad asset classes including equity, fixed income, inflation-hedging, and short-term defensive instruments and may be subject to all of the risks of these asset classes. ETFs generally present the same risks as an investment in a conventional fund that has the same investment objectives, strategies, and policies. The market price of an ETF's shares may be above or below the shares' net asset value; and an active trading market for an ETF's shares may not develop or be maintained. The allocations become more conservative over time: The fund's asset mix allocated to equities will decrease while the percentage allocated to fixed income will increase as the target date approaches. The higher the allocation is to equities, the greater the risk. The principal value of the investment option is never guaranteed, including at and after the target date. Diversification does not assure a profit or protect against market loss.
