

ClearTrack® 2035

Class R1 TCETX | Class R6 TCHDX

Investment Objective

The fund seeks the highest total return (that is, a combination of income and long-term capital appreciation) over time consistent with its asset mix. The fund will seek to reduce volatility as a secondary objective from the five years before until five years after the fund's target retirement date of 2035 (the "Dynamic Rebalancing Period").

Macroeconomic Overview

Equity performance in the fourth quarter of 2017 largely mirrored strong, consistent growth throughout 2017, and was persistent across most major regions. U.S. equities (S&P 500®), led the way, followed by emerging markets (MSCI Emerging Markets Index), and international-developed equities (MSCI EAFE Index); appreciating 6.6%, 5.7%, and 4.3%, respectively. The quarter's strong equity market performance was driven by many advanced economies approaching full employment and inflation rising slowly. In addition to this, strong economic data throughout the quarter provided additional fuel for broad equity market appreciation. All of these pro-growth factors contributed to muted results in the fixed income market, with the Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate Index rising 1.1% and Bloomberg Barclays US Aggregate Index gaining 0.4%. Commodities had their strongest quarter of performance this year, appreciating 4.4% (Bloomberg Commodity Index). This was primarily attributed to a sharp rise in crude oil during the quarter, which rose 16.9%. The U.S. dollar slowed its losses, falling only 0.09% in the fourth quarter, following declines of 3.5% and 3.2% in the first two quarters of the year.

Fund Overview

Transamerica ClearTrack 2035 underperformed its benchmark, the Dow Jones Target 2035 Index, during the quarter, net of fees. Underperformance was a result of the fund's sub-asset class allocation effects. The primary contributor to this effect was international equity, as the Vanguard FTSE Developed Markets Equity ETF underperformed the Dow Jones developed market indices. Additional detractors were the fund's underweights to U.S. small cap and emerging markets equities, as both asset classes were high performers in the quarter. The fund's underweight to U.S. fixed income, which underperformed equities, added relative value. In absolute terms, all the fund's underlying holdings had positive returns over the quarter. Equities outperformed fixed income holdings, where U.S. large cap equity, emerging markets equity, and international equity were the top performers. Within fixed income, international was the top performer.

Outlook

At the end of December, QS favors U.S. equities versus investment grade (IG) bonds, though this conviction level was approaching a 12-month low. This level of conviction in U.S. equities was lower than one month prior, largely due to QS' Leading Economic Indicator Index (LEI). The LEI was driven down largely due to a negative change in global trade data and change in average hours worked. Additionally, a rising interest rate trend also moderated the preference for equities versus bonds. QS has stronger conviction in international-developed equities over U.S. equities, largely on the observation of steeper yield curves in EAFE countries and a more favorable valuation level. Stronger price momentum in U.S. markets served as the only moderating factor between these assets. In fixed income, QS is modestly in favor of U.S. high yield bonds over investment grade. This view is driven by spread tightening and relative valuation between the two assets.

Performance figures reflect any fee waivers and/or expense reimbursements by the Investment Manager. Without such waivers and/or reimbursements, the performance would be lower. Future waivers and/or reimbursements are at the discretion of the Investment Manager.

The Dow Jones Target 2035 Index is an unmanaged index used as a general measure of market performance. It is not possible to invest directly into an index. Calculations assume dividends and capital gains are reinvested and do not include any managerial expenses.

The ClearTrack® target date options invest in exchange-traded funds (ETFs) which may represent a variety of broad asset classes including equity, fixed income, inflation-hedging, and short-term defensive instruments and may be subject to all of the risks of these asset classes. ETFs generally present the same risks as an investment in a conventional fund that has the same investment objectives, strategies, and policies. The market price of an ETF's shares may be above or below the shares' net asset value; and an active trading market for an ETF's shares may not develop or be maintained. The allocations become more conservative over time: The fund's asset mix allocated to equities will decrease while the percentage allocated to fixed income will increase as the target date approaches. The higher the allocation is to equities, the greater the risk. The principal value of the investment option is never guaranteed, including at and after the target date. Diversification does not assure a profit or protect against market loss.
